

Timothy Michael Scanlon
Athlete – Class of 1979

Tim was a three sport stand-out all three years that he attended Park, participating in football, basketball and track. He continued his athletic career at the University of Minnesota as a high jumper his freshman year and a member of the JV basketball team his sophomore year. He is currently the vice president of event production at ESPN, and in 2003 won an Emmy Award for Technical Achievement.

Although his days as a team sport player have come to an end, sports and fitness are a priority for him. About 10 years ago he began training for his first marathon – Grandma’s Marathon in Duluth in June, 2002. He has since completed five more marathons, the most recent the Twin Cities Marathon in October, 2011 to benefit the Livestrong Organization.
